5. Role Context

The Breamish and Till Valleys rank highly among the iconic areas of Northumberland and contains some of the most stunning landscapes in the country. The two nearest cities are Edinburgh and Newcastle, each many miles from the benefice. Not simply 'rural', this benefice is often characterised as 'deep' rural and calls for a priest with a deep love of rural life and people.

The chapter and synod of Bamburgh and Glendale Deanery are close knit and very mutually supportive. They have engaged deeply with the diocesan Deanery Planning Process and punch above their weight in terms of vision and giving.

The benefice is accustoming itself to their new priest working with them four days a week (Sunday plus 3) rather than six.

There are many opportunities for mission and community engagement for someone with a vision for this type of ministry. The populations are small and sparsely spread, yet deeply faithful and hard working, with a real and evident love for church and community and a resilience to weather the changes that have happened in rural life in recent decades. There is a will and determination for church to be at the heart of rural life, with strong engagements with local parish councils, community groups and village halls opening up many opportunities.
